

EDITOR'S NOTE

Wim Muller^{*}

The contributions in this issue of the European Journal of Legal Studies tackle various developments which are currently shaping our future and raise important questions, varying from what technological advances mean for our understanding of “law”, to how legal tools are devised in practice to deal with the challenges posed by new advances. The topic is introduced below by the members of the Infosoc Working Group of the Department of Law of the European University Institute, who organised the conference during which these contributions were first presented and were kind enough to honour the European Journal of Legal Studies by publishing them in this Special Conference Issue. On behalf of the Editorial Board of the Journal, I would like to thank the members of the working group for all the work, and Benjamin Farrand for further editorial assistance. We are pleased to offer our readers a this collection of thought-provoking essays.

^{*} Editor-in-Chief, European Journal of Legal Studies.